Chuck Delorey focuses his practice on real estate transactions, including sales and acquisitions, land use and development, leasing, and construction.

Chuck Delorey advises clients in all aspects of commercial real estate transactions, from early-stage diligence to closing to post-acquisition development work. He has significant experience managing real estate projects of all scopes and complexities, including multi-state transactions involving the acquisition or disposition of large property portfolios. Chuck routinely leads transactions under compressed timelines, coordinating among multiple stakeholders to ensure efficient closings without compromising quality or risk management. He recently assisted a national retailer in the successful assumption of leasehold interests for 18 properties located in 14 states across the country with the transaction being completed within less than six weeks.

Chuck drafts and negotiates key transactional documents – such as purchase and sale agreements, leases, easements, and construction contracts – and manages all components of title, survey, and financing review. Clients value his ability to quickly understand their business priorities and adapt to their preferred deal structures and internal processes. This client-centered approach has resulted in long-standing relationships with national and regional real estate companies, developers, and operators. Chuck also serves as lead leasing counsel for a top national retailer and regularly acts as local counsel in multi-jurisdictional deals.

In addition to real estate and health care, Chuck performs corporate transactional work such as corporate planning and formation, commercial contracting and negotiation, mergers and acquisitions, and venture capital and angel fundraising. He also has experience assisting early-stage and emerging growth companies with preparation of formation documents, capitalization and financing strategies, and various contracts including employment, consultation, and customer/vendor agreements.
