Joshua Cook focuses his practice on various litigation matters.

Joshua is an associate in the Firm's Knoxville office and a member of the Advocacy Department.

Prior to attending law school and joining Baker Donelson, Joshua worked in finance as a pricing analyst for petroleum products. During his time working in the industry, Joshua witnessed firsthand the meaningful impact a skilled attorney can provide in addressing the complex challenges faced by businesses and individuals. While living and studying in Tokyo, Japan, Joshua served as an intern and provided guidance to international firms trying to navigate Japan's market and regulations. These experiences reinforced his belief that when attorneys put their clients first and offer dedicated, exceptional service, they can leave a positive, lasting impact on both their clients and community.
