When accountants, architects, doctors, engineers and lawyers are facing professional malpractice claims with the potential to jeopardize their reputations and professions, they call Baker Donelson. Our attorneys routinely defend against claims with huge financial exposure and sophisticated technical issues, and also advise on disciplinary and licensure matters. Our services in this area include not only the defense of professionals, but also advice on disciplinary and licensure matters. One of our key strengths is our experience representing both insurers, and in other instances, their insureds. We understand the drivers on both sides of the relationship – the need to limit exposure, the importance of being effective, and of course, the significance of preserving professional reputations.
