

Richard Cowart Talks with the Tennessean About ACA Case

After surviving one previous challenge in the Supreme Court and numerous rounds of legislative opposition, the future of the federal Affordable Care Act, otherwise known as Obamacare, may hinge on a technicality in a case to be argued at the country's highest court on March 4. The case, King vs. Burwell, is challenging the use of tax subsidies on the federal exchange, and could jeopardize how people in 36 states, including Tennessee, pay for insurance bought on the federal exchange using tax subsidies under Obamacare. In this Tennessean article, Richard Cowart comments on the case.

"The tax credits are everything. No tax credits? No ACA. It doesn't work," said Richard Cowart.

Read the Article