Three Baker Donelson Attorneys Named to Law360 Editorial Advisory Boards

March 09, 2012

Philip S. McSween, Adam G. Sowatzka and J. Carter Thompson of Baker, Donelson, Bearman, Caldwell and Berkowitz, PC, have been named to the 2012 editorial advisory boards for Law360, a national newswire for business lawyers.

Philip S. McSween, shareholder in the Firm's Nashville office and chair of the Health Law practice group, has been named to the 2012 Health Law 360 editorial advisory board.

Adam G. Sowatzka, shareholder in the Firm's Atlanta office, has been named to a second consecutive term on the Environmental Law360 editorial advisory board.

J. Carter Thompson, shareholder in the Firm's Jackson office, leader of the Product Liability and Mass Tort Group and co-chair of the Drug, Device and Life Sciences Industry Group, has been named to a second consecutive term on the Product Liability Law360 editorial advisory board.

The purpose of the editorial advisory board is for leading legal professionals to provide feedback and guidance to Law360. Law360 editors chose from a pool of more than 1,000 highly qualified attorneys who volunteered to fill the 12 spots on each of the various Law 360 editorial advisory boards.
